Introduction

- A person who is able to listen and understand is capable of accurately understanding and interpreting communication.
- Listening is the foundation of effective communication. If you are incapable of listening effectively, you will often misunderstand a message.

Introduction

- Listening effectively is important to developing successful relationships.
- Information and ideas are acquired through active listening.
- During listening, it is important that the listener understands and responds. (this mean)A will as receiving and understand what has been said, listening also involves responding to what has been said.

Introduction

- A skill we can all learn is how to listen effectively. the ability to listen, contributes to our feeling of well-being and improves our relationships to a great extent.

We listen for multiple reasons

➤ We listen for multiple reasons:

1. To understand Others.
2. To gather information.
3. To learn.
4. To show empathy.
5. To build relationships.

The benefit Improving our Listening

- The benefit Improving our Listening:
 1. We can become more productive at work.
 2. We can become more connected in our relationships.
 3. Listening help us to negotiate with others.
 4. Listening help us to avoid misunderstanding.
 5. Listening make life conflict-free.

Improving our Listening Self-Awareness

1. Self-Awareness:

- An important tool for becoming a good listener is becoming aware of your own behavior, feeling when listening.
- So,
 - ✓ If you use your tense and not relaxed.
 - ✓ or you look down or a way.
 - ✓ if you planning what you will say in return.

Active Listening

- All of these behaviors make it difficult to be a good listener.

2. Active Listening:

- Active listening means being as attentive and involved in the conversation during the times that you are listening as when you are speaking, you must learn to be consciously attentive to relay.
- in order to do this you must pay close attention to the speaker.

the Steps Becoming Active Listening

➤ there are '5' steps to make active listener:

1. Pay Close Attention:

- ✓ Look the speaker in the eyes.
- ✓ Stop any mental chatter.
- ✓ Don't start preparing your response while the other person is talking.
- ✓ Notice the speaker's body language and tone of voice - what are the non-verbal messages telling you.

the Steps Becoming Active Listening

2. Demonstrate Physically that you are listening:

- ✓ Nod from time to time, when appropriate.
- ✓ Use appropriate facial expressions.
- ✓ Monitor your own body language. be sure you remain relaxed rather than tense.
- ✓ Use small comments like uh, yes, right..

3. Check for Understanding:

- As we learned before our personal experience, perceptions, our feeling can influence the way that hear, it is possible for the message to get mistranslated. before responding it's important to check for understanding using these tools:

he Steps Becoming Active Listening

- Use reflecting and paraphrasing, check that you heard correctly by saying'
 - ✓ What I hear you saying is....., or
 - ✓ If I hearing you correctly,
 - ✓ You're saying....., or
 - ✓ I think you are talking about.....

4. Don't Interrupt:

There is nothing good that comes from interrupting the speaker.
you will only be limiting your chance of understanding the message because you won't hear it all -message and the speaker will get frustrated.

the Steps Becoming Active Listening

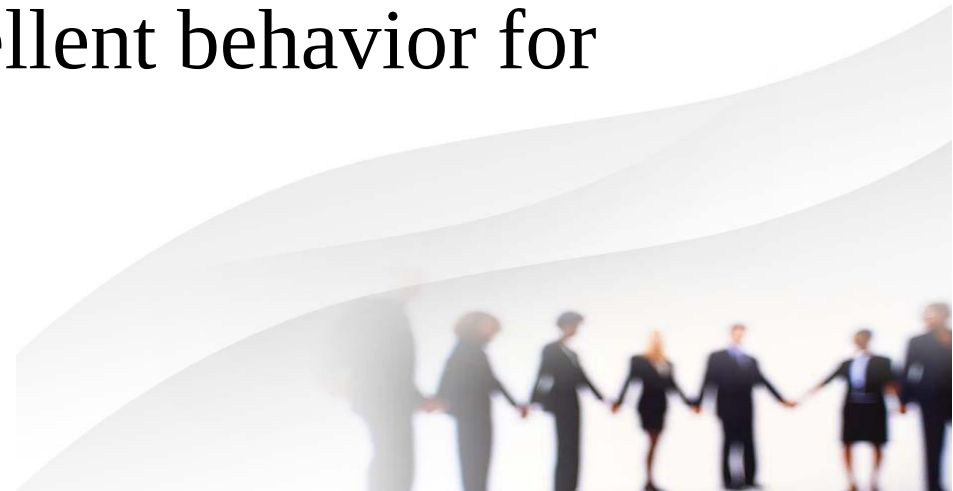

5. Respond Appropriately:

when you are actively listening, you are showing your respect for the speaker, as well as gaining the information that you need to form your response. once you have that information and have clarified it, it's time to form your reply.

the Steps Becoming Active Listening

- When expressing your thoughts:
 - ✓ Be honest(truthful).
 - ✓ Be respectful.
 - ✓ Remember that you are modeling excellent behavior for others.

Thank You
