

Perspectives in Communication

Lecture (3)

Ust. Sahar Hassan

Perspectives in Communicaton

Lecture (3)

- Out Comes of the lecture:
 - ✓ Introduction.
 - ✓ Perspectives in Communicaton
 - ✓ Factors Affecting
Perspectives in Communicaton

Perspectives in Communication

Introduction

➤ Perspectives(point of view) in Communication:

- We all see the world with our own thinking as known as our individual perceptions(understanding).
- Our individual perceptions are in actual the filters through which we see, understand the world.

Perspectives in Communication

Introduction

- Also, Individual perceptions

It is our view through which we handle a situation or a topic. all persons has different thinking /opinion.

Perspectives in Communication

Introduction

✓ So,

Perspectives in Communication:

- Perspectives are ideas, views, or fixed ways of thinking. these sometimes affect our communication.

❖ For Example,

If you have fixed idea that your teacher or father are

Perspectives in Communication

Introduction

- Strict, even when they are being friendly, you may think they are scolding you even though they are polite. In the same way others may also have fixed ideas about you, which affect whatever you say to them.

Factors Affecting Perspectives in Communicaton

1. Visual Perception:

- It is the ability to see and to interpret the visual information.
- Without accurate visual perception person would have in adifficulty in learning to read, follow directions, copy from white board for example: the famous picture that (you can see as young girl, and other see it as old woman, it is reveals(arise) the two perspectives. Both of the perspectives represented in the young and old woman are true- they simply two different ways of seeing the same thing.

Factors Affecting Perspectives in Communicaton

Factors Affecting Perspectives in Communication

2. Language:

- Language not only help in communication but it shape our perception. various emotion or feeling and experience can be influenced by the pattern of the language a person speaks.
- The same words can have different meaning depending how interpret them.

Factors Affecting Perspectives in Communication

❖ For example:

- what is the meaning of the following sentence?

A woman without her man is nothing.

- If you change, what is the meaning:

A woman. without her, man is nothing.

Factors Affecting Perspectives in Communicaton

- the words were the same in both case, but the meaning has now changed completly.
- so altough we think our meaning may be clear, we can't always sure the other person will read or hear them in that way.

Factors Affecting Perspectives in Communication

3. Past Experience:

- ✓ Our past experience greatly affects our way of thinking.
- ✓ It acts as a filter through which we see a particular situation.
- ✓ Our past experience can be positive or negative and

Factors Affecting Perspectives in Communication

- Imagine(suppose) that you are in a meeting where you will be discussing change in your personal policies at work, what will you bring to that conversation?

You might have examples of other company's policies.

you might have example from your own time in the company. or

#you might come to the table empty-handed.

Factors Affecting Perspectives in Communication

- What influences you to do any of these things? your past experience,
- ✓ you would bring outside information because you have learned in the past that comparing situations can helpful in decision making. or
- ✓ you bring examples of your own experience because you learned in the past that examples can be powerful. or

Factors Affecting Perspectives in Communication

✓ you come to the table empty-handed because in the past you have felt that your input wasn't valued or you have no past experience in this topic.

□ So:

■ In every situation, your communication is being affected by your past experience

Factors Affecting Perspectives in Communication

4. Prejudices:(Favouritism)

- It is usually unfavorable(unwanted) feeling toward people or person because of their gender, age, religion, , language or any personal characteristics.
- It greatly limit the chances of communication being successful or producing the desired result.
- ✓ We should treat each person as a separate individual and must respect his ideas.

Factors Affecting Perspectives in Communication

5. Feeling:

- feeling is known as state of consciousness such as that result from emotions, sentiment or desires.
- A person's current mood affects the way he judges other.
- When we feel happy we communicate better but if we feel ill, we will not communicate effectively.

Factors Affecting Perspectives in Communication

6. Environment:

- All of us communicate differently in different environment .
this skill will help us in effective communication.
- We speak to our colleagues and friends in different way.
- Environment will make the person more comfortable and to attain level of formality which is important in particular situation.

Thank You

